Description

Elegant and luminous floral still life depicting a large spray of flowers arranged around a black vase, in a spirit very characteristic of French decorative painting of the Belle Époque. This composition captivates through the richness of its palette and the quality of its chiaroscuro in brown and golden tones, particularly highlighting the roses, geraniums and garden flowers treated with beautiful sensitivity. The artist skilfully plays with the contrasts between the floral masses and the dark background, creating a warm, refined atmosphere typical of late 19th-century bourgeois interiors. The brushstroke is supple and lively, with delicate work on petals and transparencies, testifying to academic training or a quality decorative painter. The work is signed lower right H. Tessier. Very fine decorative presence for this
