Description

"Assumption of the Virgin," oil on canvas, 18th century. Period: 18th century. Technique: oil on canvas. Dimensions: framed 118.5 x 93.5 cm; canvas 99.5 x 74 cm. Important 18th-century Italian religious painting depicting the Assumption of the Virgin, an oil on canvas from the 18th-century Italian school, characterized by a dramatic composition and a style clearly inspired by the great Baroque tradition. The Virgin is depicted in glory above a mass of clouds, accompanied by angels and cherubs, while the Apostles gather around the empty tomb in attitudes of wonder and devotion. The scene stands out for its strong compositional dynamism, the intense expressiveness of the figures, and the rich coloration of the drapery, rendered in warm, luminous tones that accentuate the theatrical character of the sacred episode. The work demonstrates remarkable painterly quality in the construction of the figures' anatomy and the modulation of light, with references to the late Baroque figurative tradition of central and northern Italy. Particularly effective is the contrast between the earthly dimension of the Apostles and the celestial vision of the ascending Madonna, an iconographic solution typical of 18th-century devotional painting. The canvas is set within a gilded, carved wooden frame from a later period, richly decorated with classical-style plant motifs, which enhances the monumentality of the whole.
