Description

An exceptional antique necklace dating from around 1850, crafted in 925 silver and 12-karat gold, entirely adorned with magnificent old-cut diamonds of extraordinary brilliance and historical charm. The piece features two prominent central diamonds totaling approximately 8 carats, accompanied by additional diamonds totaling about 32 carats, creating a spectacular composition typical of 19th-century European high jewelry. The elegant openwork and floral motifs perfectly reflect the refined ornamental taste of the era. The lower part of the necklace is detachable and can be worn separately as an elegant daisy pendant, offering rare versatility and collectible value. This important antique piece of jewelry has also been featured in an Italian magazine, confirming its
