Description

This globe, made around 1870 and distributed by the Hachette & Cie bookshop, then located at 77 boulevard Saint-Germain, illustrates the rise of geography in the XIXe century. Designed after the work of Louis Vivien de Saint-Martin (1802-1896), it testifies to a desire to make the world legible and accessible. Mounted on a turned base of blackened wood and encircled by a graduated brass meridian, the object combines scientific precision and handcrafted elegance. It remains today a precious witness to the geographical knowledge of its time and the major role of publishers in the dissemination of knowledgeEra: 1870Good condition, some wear marks on the globeDelivery possible in France and internationally on quotation.Width: 36 cmDepth: 30 cmHeight: 59
