Description

Pair of Royal Blue Glass Vases with Gilt Applied Decoration, Art Nouveau Style, Early 20th Century An elegant pair of square-shaped vases in deep royal blue glass, created in the Art Nouveau style during the early 20th century. These vases are distinguished by their remarkable naturalistic decoration composed of gilt applied ornaments depicting salamanders, butterflies, bees, and flowering branches, delicately arranged across the various sides.

Inspired by the animal and plant kingdoms, this decorative repertoire perfectly reflects the Art Nouveau aesthetic, with its fascination for nature and organic forms. The striking contrast between the rich cobalt-blue glass and the luminous gilded decoration creates an exceptionally refined visual effect. The motifs appear to move gracefully across the smooth surfaces, lending the pieces a sense of vitality, elegance, and decorative sophistication. The clean, geometric form of the square bodies harmoniously balances the fluidity of the naturalistic ornamentation, creating a subtle dialogue between architectural structure and organic inspiration. This combination of simplicity and decorative richness is characteristic of the finest decorative arts of the Art Nouveau period.
