Description

Mixed media painting Collage of oil on canvas and steel wire, a technique that lends a physical, industrial texture to the expressive, almost spectral human form. The work uses an ochre-toned monochrome palette that highlights the interplay between oil paint and integrated steel wire. This approach recalls the assemblage movement, which enjoyed great success in the mid-twentieth century. The subject is a haunting, fragmented face that seems to dissolve into the background. Paint drips and thread "lines" create an impression of psychological depth and modern existentialism. Signed lower left. 50 cm wide and 100 cm high. Total weight 2 kg. Twentieth-century Belgian school.
