Description

Pair of candlesticks. Wrought iron. 20th century.

Pair of wrought-iron candelabras or torches, featuring four curved legs terminating in finials and a baluster-shaped shaft adorned with discs and a vase-shaped knob. Also known as "torches", these lights were commonly used in important homes and civil and religious institutions in Spain from the Gothic period onwards. Stylistically, they feature elements typical of the Spanish Baroque school. -
