Description

An elegant French Louis XIII armchair from the 19th century, testifying to the grandeur and craftsmanship of the period. Its carved solid wood frame features exquisite detailing: scrolled armrests, floral rosettes and a central shell motif along the spacer, all resting on imposing paw feet that lend the piece a sculptural presence. The deep black linen upholstery offers a refined contrast with the natural patina of the wood, combining classic ornamentation with modern sobriety. The result is an armchair that is both timeless and contemporary, ideal for a well-groomed interior or as a centerpiece in an enthusiast's collection. A remarkable example of 19th-century French craftsmanship, combining fine carving with understated textile elegance.
