Description

Large 18th-century three-leaf embroidered and painted silk screen with rich allegorical and naturalistic decor. Each panel features remarkable decorative work blending birds, floral bouquets, plant garlands, putti, medallions with antique profiles and fantastical animals in a late 18th-century neoclassical spirit. The fineness of the embroidery and polychrome highlights on a moiré silk background probably made for an aristocratic interior or reception house. The panels are framed with gilded wood baguettes. Very elegant decor animated by symmetrical compositions inspired by the arts Louis XVI decorative arts, with refined iconography combining abundance, nature and
