Description

Dating from around 1900, this remarkable pair of Spanish armchairs is a testament to time-honored Iberian craftsmanship and authentic, timeless design. Entirely handcrafted in solid oak, these armchairs immediately captivate the eye with their robust silhouettes and rich amber patina with honey highlights, a warm finish acquired over more than a century of history. They embody with ease the spirit of traditional craftsmanship while asserting a structural solidity that harmonizes wonderfully with modern, organic and brutalist interiors. Every detail reveals the care taken by the craftsman who created them. The wide, contoured seats and sturdy backrests are secured by hand-forged iron rivets, giving these armchairs a historic sturdiness. The thick, flat armrests feature precise linear grooves at their ends, while the architectural legs come alive with hand-carved details. The front legs and struts are adorned with recessed geometric panels, delicate floral rosettes and an elegant central cartouche, all framed by subtle stylized fleurons at the top of the uprights. Preserving their excellent antique condition, these two armchairs are perfectly solid and display an authentic patina of wear that only accentuates their charm. Whether placed as a stately accent chair duo in an entryway, on either side of a fireplace, or as a contrasting touch in a contemporary living room, these exceptional pieces lend any space a deep sense of history and warmth.
