Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Wrought iron

Description

Rare and unusual, this 19th-century European combination weapon integrates a pistol and a folding knife in a compact mechanism. Ingenious and multifunctional, it testifies to the period's fascination with concealed and original weapons, combining craftsmanship, functionality and mechanical sophistication. Made of metal with high-precision moving parts, this weapon features a folding blade concealed in the body of the pistol. When the mechanism is cocked, the trigger extends and participates in the firing system, illustrating the innovative technical solutions characteristic of 19th-century European gunsmiths. Compact in size and richly decorated, this piece remains functional and makes an exceptional collector's item for lovers of antique weapons, curiosities and historic mechanical
