Description

An elegant Japanese export porcelain beaker vase produced in the Arita region around 1860-1880. Extremely thinly potted and remarkably light, this eggshell porcelain vessel was created for export to Europe and America during the early Meiji period.

The hand-painted decoration depicts lively theatrical and festival scenes with performers, children, bows, fans and hobby horses rendered in richly coloured overglaze enamels and gilding.

The expressive figures and stylised costumes reflect the Kabuki-inspired decorative imagery popular in late Edo and early Meiji export porcelain.

The underside bears the red overglaze mark "Hichozaan Shinpo zo". The Hichozaan Shinpo name was associated with an important export
