Description

Fine earthenware covered mug with naturalistic decoration in the Louis XVI Directoire style, late 18th/early 19th century. The quality of the decorations is remarkable and charming, with trompe l'oeil motifs such as the lid with its acorn and the handle imitating a branch of great realism, entirely in the naturalistic spirit of the period. Insects such as butterflies and caterpillars are painted with remarkable delicacy. Good condition, a chip at the bottom of the cup visible on the photos.
