Description

Elegant Directoire-period walnut band table, featuring a very beautiful, sober and balanced line characteristic of the late XVIIIe century. This charming table seduces with the purity of its proportions, the finesse of its tapered base and the warm softness of its antique walnut with its beautiful honey-brown patina. Its oval top deploys a presence both refined and convivial, ideal for an elegant dining room or a home of character. It features an antique extension piece carefully crafted in keeping with the original entablature, allowing the table to be harmoniously enlarged while retaining its aesthetic and authenticity. This detail testifies to quality antique workmanship, thought out to preserve the visual balance of the piece. The Directoire style appears here in all its subtlety: straight, sober lines
