Description

A large Tokyo School bronze okimono depicting an elephant in motion with its trunk raised, a gesture traditionally interpreted as a symbol of good fortune, wisdom, and prosperity. Particular attention has been devoted to the details of the figure, evident in the rendering of the body, legs, ears, eyes, and trunk. The surface features finely worked texturing that enhances the naturalistic appearance of the skin. Signed Gyokusui beneath the foot. Period: Meiji, late 19th century Dimensions: 46 × 55.5 × 14 cm Weight: 5 kg Condition: Excellent condition.
