Description

High Atlas, circa 1920-1960Rare Berber terracotta dish with ebony patina obtained by smoking, adorned with a frieze of triangular bone inlays. A piece of great graphic purity, combining ancestral tradition and timeless modernity.Arts berbèresThis dish, 38 cm in diameter by 5 cm high and weighing a generous 2.066 kg, bears witness to the craftsmanship handed down within the Berber communities of the Maghreb. The deep black patina, obtained by smoking, gives the terracotta an almost mineral presence, while bone inlays punctuate the marli with a geometric decoration of great sobriety.A rare object, perfectly preserved, no chips, no cracks, no restoration. It embodies the authentic aesthetic of Kabyle and High Atlas production from the early to mid-20e century.With its raw elegance and
