Description

The Saint-Louis Cleo crystal decanter is a high-end piece produced by the crystalworks, established around 1903. The Cleo design is recognizable by its engraved Louis XV-style arabesques, refined facets, and hand-blown and then hand-engraved construction. The Cleo model was manufactured for over a century, until the 2010s. Based on its shape and the quality of the crystal, it is likely: either a liqueur decanter, a wine cellar jug, or a serving piece. The so-called "burette" shape with a long, elongated neck; the applied swan-neck handles; the original stoppers, cut into elongated teardrops; no chips on the neck or stopper; the decoration is acid-etched and wheel-engraved with floral scrolls; short stem on a small circular foot; hand-blown; crystal clear without any limescale haze; Saint-Louis stamp
