Description

An elegant coffee table from the Emilia region, most likely from the Rolo area, dating to the mid-19th century. Crafted from walnut and veneered with walnut burl of exceptional quality, it features a refined circular top characterized by a spectacular radial pattern of grain, carefully arranged to create a decorative effect of great elegance. The top is further embellished by thin concentric bands and a delicate inlaid border along the edge, executed with great precision and decorative flair. The finely turned central shaft displays the harmonious and proportioned forms typical of the finest 19th-century Emilian craftsmanship. The shaped tripod base is enriched by refined geometric inlays on the three legs, a detail that attests to the high quality of the piece's craftsmanship. The piece as a whole stands out
