Description

Very rare large red-figure bell crater (H: 29.3 cm). Great Greece. This crater comes from an Apulian workshop towards the end of the IVe century B.C. (appraised by D. Lebourrier, expert in archaeology). On the first side, we observe a standing woman presenting a large tray in front of an Eros Thanatos seated on rocks and holding a mirror as well as a tambourine. The other side presents two standing beardless men, arranged facing each other. Under the handles are painted radiating palmettes. The scene is framed by a band of laurel leaves and a band of meanders. This witness of Antiquity shows ancient restorations that do not alter the finesse of the motifs. To be put in perspective with the crater (-430 / -420 BC) in the Antiquities Department of the Louvre (accession number: CA 307, catalog number: G
