beautifully complex design receives a very distinctive medallion revealing numerous stylized tribal and plant motifs. The border is composed of large stylized flowers on an ivory, buff and orange background. The mixed-hair bangs are in good condition, and often include wool from goats, sheep, camels and horsehair. These mixtures are found in most ethnic rugs from Iran, Central Asia and the Caucasus... The bright, soft wool colors contrast with the light, indigo, white, pink, orange, blue and red of all the patterns laid on the darker field, provoking a striking, luminous contrast. These rugs are essentially dyed with natural, mineral and vegetable products. The intricate design features numerous tribal motifs and other stylized vegetal motifs that are always found on these rugs. These rugs are knotted in the Shiraz region near ancient Persepolis, which gave its name to Persia, now Iran. Shiraz is located in the province of Fars, where the Gashghai tribes reside and produce rugs under both names, Shiraz or Ghashghai.
