particularly for Louis XIV. He also collaborated with the greatest cabinetmakers and sculptors of 18th-century France. He is known for his fine Boulle and Regency-style pendulum clocks. His mechanisms are often signed "Jean Godde Laine à Paris" or "Godde Laisne." The clock is in working order; it winds down completely and strikes the hours and quarters when the pendulum is pressed. As this is a clock over 300 years old, accuracy is not guaranteed. The clock is sold with an elegant wooden box and comes complete with a key for winding and setting.
