Description

Oil on canvas. Original canvas. Hand-signed. The backs of goddesses who refuse us their faces are the very architecture of romantic desire: a surface of marble or oil paint which, by refusing direct visual contact, condemns us to perpetual fascination. In these dorsal geographies, where the spine traces the axis of an indecipherable mystery, dwell the enigmatic, Callipygian figures who populate the unfathomable Mediterranean Arcadia, figures who need neither words nor facial expressions to manifest their divine sovereignty. Their beauty is a self-surrendering offering, a secret sculpted before a sea of pines and sea air, where the renunciation of the face is not an act of disdain, but the consecration of a myth. With their backs turned towards us, these divinities invite us to inhabit the realm of
