Description

Bring a timeless charm of French architecture and historic cityscapes into your home with this beautiful original mid-20th-century oil painting by Jacques Briot. This work depicts the famous Saint-Leu district in Amiens, affectionately known as the "Little Venice of the North" thanks to its picturesque network of canals lined with small, colorful houses. In the background rises majestically the great Gothic cathedral of Notre-Dame d'Amiens, giving the composition beautiful depth and a strong architectural presence. Jacques Briot uses a visible, textured touch here, combined with a soft, warm palette, to capture the changing light of northern France. The overall effect is one of liveliness, elegance and charm. A beautiful decorative and collectible piece, ideal for a gallery wall, living room,
