Description

Portrait of a young man - Italian school of the 19th century
Charming portrait of a very young man, presented mid-body in a pose that is both natural and seductive. The model, with his gentle, slightly dreamy gaze, turns towards the viewer with a spontaneous elegance that lends the whole a great freshness. Her arm raised behind her head accentuates the figure's youthful grace and lends the painting a touch of understated romanticism. The artist, who remains unknown, reveals a beautiful sensitivity in the treatment of the face and skin tone. The interplay of warm shadows, amber nuances and delicate features evoke the influence of 19th-century Italian schools, where the study of the live model occupied an essential place. The supple brushstrokes and harmonious tones lend the work
