Description

This elegant 18th-century antique walnut display case from the UK is a perfect example of the William IV style, renowned for its harmonious proportions and understated elegance. Made from richly grained walnut, it features glass doors with geometric mullions, creating a harmonious rhythm that showcases the craftsmanship of the period. The cabinet rests on turned, faceted legs linked by a sinuous strut and finished with ebony ball feet, a classic detail of the period. Beneath the display case, two drawers with original brass handles provide practical storage space. The interior has been tastefully furnished and lined with velvet, creating a soft, luxurious setting for books, porcelain or collectibles. Slight traces of use, normal for its age, highlight its authentic patina and historic charm. A choice piece for
