Description

Medieval Processional Cross Plate, Embossed Copper - Bishop in Majesty - 14th-15th Century
Rare processional cross plate in embossed and chased copper, of tri-lobed form, dating from the 14th or early 15th century. The decoration features, in the center, a bishop seated on his cathedra, dressed in his episcopal vestments and wearing his mitre. In his hand, he holds a processional cross, an attribute emphasizing his ecclesiastical dignity. The three-lobed ends are adorned with finely stylized oak leaves, characteristic of the Gothic decorative vocabulary. This plaque was originally attached to a wooden-core processional cross, as evidenced by the three preserved mounting holes. It is made of embossed and chased red copper, today showing a very beautiful, dark green antique
