Description

Important polychrome ceramic statue depicting a young girl walking barefoot, dressed in a dress with flowing drapery and topped with a wide hat embellished with a bow. She holds a small bouquet or bunch of fruit in her right hand and wears a woven basket on her left arm. The work is captivating for the quality of its modeling, the gentle expressiveness of the face, and the naturalistic treatment of the fabrics and accessories. The enameled polychromy, in shades of green, cream and ochre, lends the piece a decorative charm typical of late 19th-century artistic production. This large decorative figure evokes the naturalistic and Art Nouveau creations produced in France, Germany or Austria around 1900. These large dimensions, 96 cm high, make it a highly decorative and out-of-the-ordinary
