Description

Large Southern Songyes statue with visible Luba influences in the fineness of the features, in light wood with a beautiful patina, note the lighter patina on the torso and belly, as it must have been probably had a loincloth, a necklace with beads, bells and magical substances around her neck. Very finely carved, with ritualistic belly scarification, the magic horn on the skull, the finely very pure, cubist design, a beautiful and rare model of its kind, as Songye statues are often stocky and aggressive (see the book: La redoutable statuare Songye), this one is Height 74 cm with its blackened wooden base.
