Description

An elegant Piedmontese chest of drawers dating from the late 18th to early 19th century, crafted from solid walnut wood. The piece features a solid and harmonious structure with four drawers, the top one of which is a drop-front drawer that opens from the front to reveal an internal compartment--a functional and refined solution typical of the period. The fronts are embellished with refined light wood inlays, characteristic of the Piedmontese cabinetmaking tradition. The drawers retain their original metal handles and pull-out mechanisms. The slightly projecting top and the contoured base lend elegance and movement to the piece as a whole. The original, well-preserved patina enhances the wood grain and attests to the piece's authenticity and historical significance. A piece of great charm,
