Description

Elegant Empire period secretary with flap.Blonde walnut, original marble and antique trimSober, balanced and highly elegant, this charming Empire-period secretary with flap perfectly illustrates the refinement of French furniture from the first quarter of the 19th century. Made of walnut with magnificent flamed veining, it seduces with the quality of its wood, the purity of its lines and the nobility of its proportions.The front is punctuated by two imposing scrolled columns that frame the piece with majesty, bringing that architectural character so sought after in Empire furniture. Their powerful design contrasts harmoniously with the softness of the weathered walnut, highlighting the superb veneers with their warm, deep shades. The desk is topped with an elegantly curved column.The secretary is topped by an elegant original marble top, whose presence underlines the precious character of the ensemble. It also retains its antique gilt-bronze trim, original handles and functional lock accompanied by its cloverleaf key, a detail always appreciated by lovers of authentic furniture. Once you've opened it, you'll be able to take your pick of the furniture.Once the flap has been opened, the furniture returns to its original function: that of an elegant secretary for correspondence and storing precious papers. As is often the case with Empire furniture, usefulness is combined here with a rigorous, timeless aesthetic. This piece of furniture has been designed to be as functional as possible.This piece of furniture has benefited from a complete restoration in our workshops. The woods received preventive and curative treatment against xylophagous insects, the whole was carefully revised and a wax finish in the respect of traditions gave it back all the depth of its ancient patina. Today, this piece of furniture has been completely restored in our workshops.Today, it presents itself in a very fine state of preservation, retaining most of its original elements and all the charm of quality furniture that has spanned two centuries of history.An elegant and decorative secretary, ideal in an office, library or classic interior, where it will immediately bring the distinction and refinement of Empire furniture.Empire period, early 19th century.Walnut and walnut veneer.Original marble, bronzes and metalwork.Functional cloverleaf key and lock.Very nice condition after restoration in our workshops.Beautiful waxed patina and warm old walnut color.
