Description

A striking and highly decorative large signed French mushroom lamp, dating from the 1960s-1970s, with an exceptional sculptural form and beautiful iridescent art glass finish. Bold, atmospheric, and unmistakably stylish, this is a true statement lighting piece that perfectly captures the glamour of mid-century and space-age design. The lamp features a dramatic oversized mushroom-shaped shade with softly curled edges, raised on an elegant elongated baluster-form base. The hand-blown glass displays extraordinary flowing tones of deep cobalt blue, violet, bronze, and oil-slick iridescence, creating a constantly shifting surface that changes beautifully depending on the light and angle of view. Its organic form and luminous finish give it a strong studio glass quality, while the overall silhouette recalls iconic French and Murano-inspired lighting of the period. Signed by the artist along the lower section of the glass, the lamp carries both decorative impact and collectible appeal, making it an exceptional addition to a refined living room, bedroom, hallway, or sophisticated interior setting. Equally impressive when illuminated or displayed unlit, this rare large-scale example offers both functional lighting and sculptural presence. Presented in excellent condition and ready for use.
