Description

William Joseph Julius Caesar Bond (1833-1926)William Joseph Julius Caesar Bond, n was a British painter specializing in seascapes and river landscapes.The son of a schoolteacher, he benefited early on from an environment conducive to study and quickly turned to art.He apprenticed with miniaturist Thomas Griffiths, then came to the attention of Pre-Raphaelite collector John Miller, who became his patron.His early works bear the hallmarks of Pre-Raphaelitism, with a keen sense of detail and highly polished compositions. Bond exhibited from the 1850s at the Liverpool Academy, of which he became a member in 1859, as well as in London at the Royal Academy and the Society of British Artists.Over time, his style evolved towards freer painting, influenced by J. M. W.
