Description

Art Deco chandelier Chromed metal and opal glass chandelier with 8 light points
The central column, which looks like walnut, is actually made of metal ; the rest of the geometric structure is polished chrome steel
It features 4 lower main light points in marbled opaline glass, as well as 4 secondary vertical glass elements with light points integrated directly into the central structure
The amber organic veins give it an alabaster appearance when switched off, and diffuse a warm, atmospheric glow when switched on 80 cm wide, 80 cm deep and 65 cm high
Traces of wear from age and use; one of the glass fixtures has been glued back together and a small ball is missing from the top of the chandelier
Interbellum lighting
