Description

Painting depicting a pair of lion cubs
Oil on canvas
Dimensions: canvas 50 × 60 cm; with frame 68 × 77 cm
Period: late 19th - early 20th century
A wonderful painting depicting two adorable lion cubs, rendered with great sensitivity and naturalness. The composition is striking for its balanced proportions and the expressive rendering of the muzzles, which convey sweetness and intimacy. The warm colors, modulated in browns, ochres, and golden hues, lend depth and softness to the whole, while the brushwork--loose yet controlled--reveals a mature and confident technique. The work, signed in the lower right corner, exudes a delicate and affectionate atmosphere, typical of late 19th- and early 20th-century animal painting, where the focus is not only descriptive but also emotional.

In terms of style, subject matter, and painterly quality, the painting can be attributed to the circle of Géza Vastagh's school, a renowned Hungarian painter known for his depictions of animals--particularly felines--observed from life and rendered with strong empathy, anatomical accuracy, and a refined use of color. A work of great tenderness and charm, ideal for both classical and modern settings. Cod: 384
