Description

Outdoor easel with storage drawer known as the "French easel". As soon as artists started painting landscapes, they enriched their visual experience by drawing in front of the motif. This practice intensified in the late 18th century for outdoor enthusiasts. Color merchants, led by Sennelier, developed paints in tubes and light and lightweight equipment for walking. This lightweight easel rests on a sturdy tripod that can be adapted to the inclination of the chosen terrain. The height of the picture stand is adjustable. Signature on an oval plaque at the back of the famous house SENNELIER 3 quai Voltaire in Paris, supplier to painters for almost 130 years. Good working order, easily folds and unfolds. Brass wing nuts; handle in good condition. First part of the 20th century. Case
