Description

Magnificent French Art Nouveau jardinière dating from circa 1905, combining ironwork and a richly patinated copper bowl. This piece illustrates the organic elegance characteristic of the movement: flowing lines, delicate scrolls and botanical motifs seem to spring naturally from the structure. The hammered copper vessel is set in an ornate metal frame, creating a striking interplay of textures: warm, luminous copper contrasting with darker, sculptural ironwork. Its proportions make it an ideal decorative element for an entrance, conservatory or living room, whether used as a planter or displayed as a work of art in its own right. A refined example of early 20th-century French craftsmanship, combining functionality with the expressive beauty of Art Nouveau. Goblet diameter: 22 cm.
