Description

PAIR OF EMPIRE PERIOD MAHOGANY ARMCHAIR Elegant pair of Empire period solid mahogany armchairs, first quarter of the 19th century. These chairs feature a slightly upturned back, characteristic of Imperial period production, framed by console armrests with elegant scrolled movement. The consoles are adorned with finely carved palmettes, a motif emblematic of the Empire's decorative repertoire. They rest on a base of a small, flat base. They rest on turned front legs and saber-shaped back legs, giving the ensemble a balanced, refined silhouette. The quality of the mahogany, the sobriety of the lines and the harmony of the proportions perfectly illustrate the aesthetics of First Empire furniture. It's the perfect example of the First Empire. Preserved in a beautiful original patina,
