Description

PROVENÇAL RADASSIER IN WALNUT Restoration period, circa 1820-1830 Rare and important solid walnut Provençal radassier from the Restoration period. Outstandingly elegant, this large Provençal banquette displays the characteristics of southern furniture from the first third of the XIXe century.
The wide scrolled armrests, the sober, balanced lines and the quality of the walnut used bear witness to meticulous craftsmanship destined for a home in fine condition. The long, openwork backrest accompanies a vast seat mulched in the Provençal tradition. The warm patina of walnut, acquired over the course of two centuries, highlights the purity of its lines and the excellence of its craftsmanship. The long, openwork backrest accompanies a vast, straw-covered seat in the Provençal tradition. With its generous dimensions, this radassier was an emblematic piece of reception furniture in the Provençal art of living. Today, it appeals as much to collectors of regional furniture as to decorators in search of an authentic, timeless piece. The set is preserved in beautiful condition, with its traditional mulching and a particularly attractive antique patina. Provence, Restoration period, circa 1820-1830.
