Description

Charming silvered bronze wax seal featuring an elegant winged allegory. The quality of the sculpture, the delicate movement of the drapery and the finesse of the details give this piece a singular presence, both decorative and refined. Beyond its primary function, this object bears witness to the taste for the decorative arts at the end of the XIXe century, a period when office accessories were conceived as veritable miniature works of art. Its sculptural character and poetic evocation make it a choice piece for a cabinet of curiosities, a collection of correspondence items or an elegant interior. Epoque: Late XIXe - early XXe century Material: Silvered bronze
