Description

We are pleased to present this splendid oil painting on canvas from the first half of the 19th century. A beautiful portrait of a young woman. A young woman of refined beauty is depicted in a half-length portrait, in a three-quarter view to the left. Her large blue eyes look directly at the viewer with a serene expression. Her skin is very fair, with a slight natural blush on her cheeks. In the 19th century, fair skin was essential for women who wanted to be fashionable and assert their aristocratic social status. Her brown hair is styled in an elaborate updo, with well-defined curls that perfectly frame her angelic face. She wears a dark red dress (in the Biedermeier/late Regency style) with a wide boat neckline that leaves her shoulders bare. The sleeves are extremely wide and puffed, typical of the fashion of the 1830s. A thin gold chain hangs from her neck, sliding down the bodice of the dress. The painting is of excellent artistic quality, with delicate brushstrokes that blend harmoniously into the various shades. The warm tones of the dress contrast perfectly with the cool, dark background, highlighting the woman's figure. The background is also rich in refined details: on the left, a dark curtain stands out, while on the right, a delicate natural landscape is set against a deep blue sky. This painting will captivate you and transport your imagination into the life of this beautiful and elegant young woman of the 19th century. The artwork is presented in a gilded frame that perfectly complements the painting. The painting is in good condition, with slight imperfections on the canvas consistent with its age, which do not detract from its beauty. Please view all images.
