Description

Pair of 19th-century polychrome porcelain holy-water fonts by Jacob PETIT (1796 - 1868) depicting angels. Jacob PETIT also known as Jacob Mardochée was a highly renowned French porcelain maker in the 19th century. His career began as a painter on porcelain. He entered the studio of painter Antoine Jean GROS dit "le Baron GROS", a disciple of Jacques Louis DAVID, as a pupil. In 1822 he joined the Sèvres factory. He founded his own factory in Fontainebleau in 1830. His Rococo-influenced artistic style was characterized by bold shapes and bright colors enhanced by gilding. He enjoyed great success with the 19th-century bourgeoisie. From 1834 onwards, he took part in numerous exhibitions, winning several awards. These stoup covers are both signed with Jacob PETIT's initials
