Description

Desk by Georges Frydman (1924-2022) dating from the 1950s. Free-form top, offset pedestal has two drawers, gray lacquered metal base.

Mahogany veneer, brass handles. This desk is typical of the 50's, and is one of the first creations of architect Georges Frydman, who trained at the Toulouse School of Architecture and was inspired by the work of Le Corbusier. During the 60's and 70's, he created a range of functional, modern quality furniture. He created his own publishing house in the 50's (EFA), mastering the entire production chain, from design to distribution.
