Description

Charming French table display cabinet dating from around 1900, made of solid wood with a warm natural finish and a faceted glass door. Its clean lines and simple proportions evoke rustic craftsmanship while revealing an early 20th-century modern sensibility. Inside, a single shelf divides the space into two compartments, ideal for storing or displaying small objects, books or ceramics. The door features a delicate brass latch, adding a subtle decorative touch. Paired with other display cabinets, they form a balanced, timeless composition, perfect on a console, sideboard or desk. We have two vitrines in our collection (see our other articles and photos). These small French display cabinets with their minimalist design perfectly combine elegance and functionality.
