Description

This pair of imposing polychrome porcelain candlesticks, standing a full 61 centimeters tall, represents a refined example of prestigious 19th-century German art craftsmanship. The sculptures depict two slender female figures captured in graceful, fluid poses, which can be interpreted as elegant allegories of the seasons or classical mythological figures. Each figure wears a flowing gown featuring meticulous details, richly decorated with delicate hand-painted floral motifs and soft color gradations. The candles are housed atop the headdresses, skillfully shaped like flower buds to blend perfectly with the design. The contoured bases echo the Rococo style, embellished with relief appliqués and decorated feet that lend the structure a slender appearance. The excellent state of preservation
