Description

Elegant jewelry interpretation of one of Hermès' most emblematic motifs, this Collier de Chien ring is crafted in 18-carat (750/1000) rose gold and accompanied by its original case. Inspired by the famous bracelet created in the 1920s, itself borrowing its aesthetic from collars intended for hunting dogs, the Collier de Chien collection has become one of Hermès' most recognizable signatures. Its architecture is based on a subtle balance between graphic power and jewelry refinement. The ring faithfully reproduces the constituent elements of the historic model: two opposing pyramids, here entirely paved with brilliant-cut diamonds, framing a central mobile ring. The latter evokes the clasp of the original necklace and gives the model its immediately identifiable character. The delicate diamond paving lends the pyramids a particularly vivid light, contrasting with the warm softness of the rose gold. The assertive geometry of the design is thus softened by the brilliance of the stones and the perfectly mastered proportions of the setting. Both contemporary and timeless, this creation perfectly illustrates Hermès' expertise in the world of jewelry: a piece of jewelry whose design is immediately recognizable while remaining extremely elegant to wear.
