Description

This striking original artwork depicts a powerful gorilla rendered with a vivid, punk-inspired crest, combining raw energy with a distinctly modern aesthetic. Executed in bold, expressive brushwork with layered colour and vertical movement, the composition feels both contemporary and confrontational, capturing a sense of individuality and rebellion that feels as relevant now as when it was painted. The work is signed William Crenson to the lower area of the canvas; while the signature is painterly in style, it appears consistent with the artist's name as read. Believed to date from the late 1990s, the piece reflects the era's interest in urban expressionism and figurative symbolism, blending street-influenced attitude with studio technique. At the centre of the composition is a subtle embroidered detail forming the letters "PH", an unusual and tactile element that adds depth and individuality to the work. The canvas itself is handmade by the artist, enhancing its authenticity and one-off character. The artwork remains on its original wooden surround, acquired with the piece and likely intended as a protective edge rather than a formal frame. This allows flexibility: it may be displayed as is for a raw, contemporary look, or reframed to suit a more refined interior. A compelling statement artwork, ideal for modern interiors, creative spaces, or collectors seeking something visually bold with strong presence and originality. Dimensions: 96h x 105w cm
