Description

Pleistocene, Pleistocene, Myocene, what barbaric names for amateurs, but what fantastic landscapes for dreamers. fantastic landscapes for dreamers... A distant past that we have never experienced and yet, in its generosity, is now revealing some fossils in the form of teeth (so-called), to surprise us.. Rare collection of eleven fossil teeth. Among them: Three cave bear molars (Ursus spelaeus), exceptionally well preserved. These large bears lived in mountain caves throughout present-day Europe. A rare and fascinating reminder of the Ice Age! European bison teeth, two teeth of Myocene animals, sivacanthion and plagiolophus, and teeth of carnivores yet to be defined. Also rhino and hippo of the time.... These fossils have not been restoration or
