Description

This antique painting is an oil on cardboard. It depicts a countryside landscape crossed by a major river. The composition is organized in broad successive planes: in the foreground, dense vegetation composed of trees and copses in dark green tones, in the center, the calm waters of the river or stream, in the background, hills unfold beneath a pearl-gray sky. On the right bank, a rural building can be seen. The artist favors a simplification of forms with broad flat tints of color, and a palette dominated by muted greens, bluish grays and pale ochres. Technique: oil on cardboard
Epoque: First half of the 20th century
Subject: river landscape with hills and rural building
Style: post-impressionist / synthetic landscape
Condition: wear and marks of time visible on the support, consistent with the age of
