Description

A stunning late 18th-century Louis XVI half-moon console table, embodying the classic elegance of the Neoclassical style, a masterpiece of Neapolitan cabinetmaking. The frame, crafted from finely carved and lacquered wood, features fluted, tapered legs distinguished by their clean lines and harmonious proportions. The top, in white statuary marble with its characteristic semicircular shape, is meticulously finished and enhanced by a decorative border featuring classical motifs. The frieze beneath the top is embellished with carved rosette details and geometric motifs--distinctive elements of the Louis XVI style--that highlight the symmetry and refinement of the entire piece. The light-toned patina finish lends the console table a timeless charm, making it ideal for both classic settings
