Description

An elegant set of six Biedermeier chairs in light walnut, made in the first half of the 19th century and characterized by the unmistakable open-back design with a central motif of opposing scrolls, typical of the finest Austro-German craftsmanship of the period. The design is understated and refined, a perfect expression of the Biedermeier style, which prioritizes balanced proportions, the quality of the wood, and the elegance of the forms over excessive ornamentation. The warm grain of the light walnut lends the set a remarkable luminosity and makes these chairs particularly versatile for both classic and contemporary interiors. The six chairs are in excellent overall condition, with a solid and stable structure. The seats are upholstered with small-stitch embroidered fabric decorated with polychromatic floral motifs, each one unique, a detail that adds charm and sophistication to the set. The upholstery is still usable but could benefit from a slight refresh to achieve maximum comfort. A high-quality set, increasingly difficult to find complete and uniform, ideal for furnishing a dining room, a study, or a period home.
